

The future of radiation therapy

Safe and innovative options including the CyberKnife® System

Cancer treatment without surgery

CyberKnife of Long Island offers a wide range of radiation medicine treatments for all forms of cancer.

One of our many treatment options is the innovative CyberKnife which, despite its name, is actually not a knife. It's a computer-controlled delivery system that attacks tumors with high doses of radiation from virtually any direction or angle with pinpoint accuracy. No incisions, no cutting, no anesthesia.

Patients can go home or back to normal activities the very same day and complete their treatment in under a week (one to five office visits). Additionally, side effects are minimal – you won't get sick, feel a burning sensation or lose hair.

You're not in this fight alone

Our experienced team:

- Was the first in Suffolk County to use CyberKnife and has been treating patients with the technology since 2008.
- Has been using innovative technology to fight cancer for almost two decades (originally as North Shore Radiation Therapy).
- Is part of the Northwell Health Cancer Institute, which offers resources, treatment options and the highest level of care – all of which are unsurpassed in the region.
- Not only meets, but exceeds, industry standards for radiation oncology.

CyberKnife® is a registered trademark of Accuray Incorporated and is used with permission.

Did you know?

CyberKnife:

- Is so precise that higher doses of radiation can be delivered because there's less of a chance of healthy tissue being damaged. This also reduces the duration and number of treatments.
- Is an outpatient procedure, so you come to our office, not a hospital.
- Only takes 30-45 minutes per session and feels like an X-ray. There's no pain or sensation.
- Is covered by many insurance companies.
